I received a phone call from a Don Mack, (property owner near this mine).

Mr. Mack informed me that this company has started work out there (regrading/constructing the access road to the site).

His concern as a property owner (in Nevada) is that his mine may impact his water rights. His concern for calling was he was under the opinion that this company was under a stop work order because they did not have BLM permits, and this operation involves BLM administered lands. (he was aware that the BLM and I made a joint inspection last fall) - I told him that the last correspondence the Division sent was a Division Directive (dated 10-17-2003) which suspended operations until a revised map was submitted which shows that the operation was not on BLM lands, or that the BLM had approved the operation. (We have not received a response to this letter.).

I called the BLM - talked with Mike Nelson - who indicated that the BLM has not received any plans from this company.

He also indicated that the company has no authorization to maintain or improve the BLM access road to the site. Mike indicated that he will talk with the BLM ranger for the area and have him verify this report the next time he is in the area.

Mr. Mack is planning to be out there tomorrow, and will take photos to send us, if indeed they are operating.
